BE A GUNSMITH!

Get your FREE introductory video gunsmithing lesson and complete information package today!

Study at home and TURN YOUR PASSION INTO PROFIT!

Quickly learn the step-by-step secrets of how to make money gunsmithing part-time, full-time, or as a retirement income.

Currently there is a HUGE Demand for Gunsmiths.

Millions of guns need fixing. Most of the old-time gunsmiths have retired and haven't been replaced because previously there wasn't a cost effective way to quickly train individuals to become gunsmiths and help them make money fast. This has created a chronic shortage and a huge opportunity for you.

Gunsmithing is a recession-proof business. Even in tough times people spend money to get their guns repaired or professionally cleaned. It's a lot cheaper than buying a new one and they still want and need them for hunting and self defense. You can even work part-time right from your home. Your one time investment in the course could provide you with a lifetime of income and opportunity.

Here's what you will learn in your FREE VIDEO!

How AGI's Professional Gunsmithing Course changed Robert Briskey's life: "Within one short year I opened up my own firearms repair and custom refinishing shop. My business is exceeding my dreams. The freedom I enjoy being self-employed is priceless. Without the opportunity that AGI's course offered, my dream would be just that, a dream." Robert T. Briskey, Battle Hen Armory

You don't have to wait to start gunsmithing! It only takes a relatively small investment to get started. As soon as you begin watching the videos you will be able to start making repairs. Anytime you run into a problem, you just pop in the DVD on the subject or model gun that you need information on and do a quick review.

Couldn't get a better recommendation: "I made the mistake of taking another cheaper gunsmithing course. I knew I made a mistake when I read in one of my lesson books that for further instructional help, go to the AGI website and get a DVD on the subject. When other schools are giving YOU that kind of acknowledgement, then you have to be the best." Gordon Fisher

In this FREE introductory video gunsmithing lesson featuring renowned Master Gunsmith Robert "Bob" Dunlap you WILL learn:

- How to ensure reliable auto-pistol feeding and prevent jams
- Understanding and timing of Remington 870 cartridge stops
- Checking and adjusting "range" on Smith & Wesson revolvers
- Troubleshooting ejection problems on Browning A-5 shotguns
- How a gas system works on a Colt AR-15
- AR-7 trigger repairs
- Secrets of fast and easy gun repair!
- Exclusive teaching method demonstrated in proven video format that makes learning a snap and much more...

Your FREE video will come with a complete information package on how to get started in gunsmithing FAST. President's Guarantee: I am so confident you will learn how to become a gunsmith by watching this FREE video, that I will give you a $10 gift certificate good towards an AGI video of your choice when you order this package. Sincerely, Gene Kelly, President, American Gunsmithing Institute.

Guns to Grow Up With

As a kid, my first expedition into the shooting and hunting world was with a break barrel air rifle my Dad bought me for Christmas. My brother and I would race through the woods, shooting beer cans and squirrels as we imagined ourselves to be reincarnations of Jeremiah Johnson. When we got a bit older, I was given a Ruger 10/22, perhaps the iconic symbol that boyhood had given way to young adulthood.

From the days spent longing like Ralphie for a Red Ryder BB gun—complete with those motherly worries that “you’ll shoot your eye out!”—to the days of .22s and more powerful big game rifles, both types of gun have been staples of Americana, signposts marking the path to maturity. The amazing thing is, I enjoy shooting air guns and .22s as much today as I did when I was a kid, although the price and availability of .22 ammunition has certainly changed since then.

For this issue I had the opportunity to start a new tradition with my own son as we put SIG Sauer’s new MCX and P226 air guns (page 14) to work in our backyard. We set up multiple target stands from SIG around the yard, including the Quad Shooting Gallery and Quad Spinner. I worked from station to station with targets dispersed in multiple locations, next to the tool shed and in between bushes, Match Ballistic Alloy pellets ping-ponging against metal targets as I went. When it came to be my son’s turn, we worked on muzzle and trigger control, proper mag changes and sight picture. The look of delight on his face said it all.

To help inspire your next rimfire or air gun outing, we’ve complied some of the best new air gun and rimfire introductions for 2016 (page 38), and our list of the best rimfire cartridges ever made (page 24). Phil Massaro walks you through the elite .17s, while James Grant gives you an in-depth look at Ruger’s new 22/45 Lite. Here’s to the guns worth growing up with!

Lyman Auto-Advance Remote Controlled Target System

Whether used for serious target shooting or for casual plinking, no one can deny the inherent fun of shooting rimfire guns. Rimfires recoil very little, making them manageable for just about any shooter, and ammo is generally inexpensive in comparison to some of the larger centerfire cartridges. This ideal combination of affordability and lack of recoil means that shooters can participate in extended range sessions without tiring and without their pocketbook taking an intense hit.

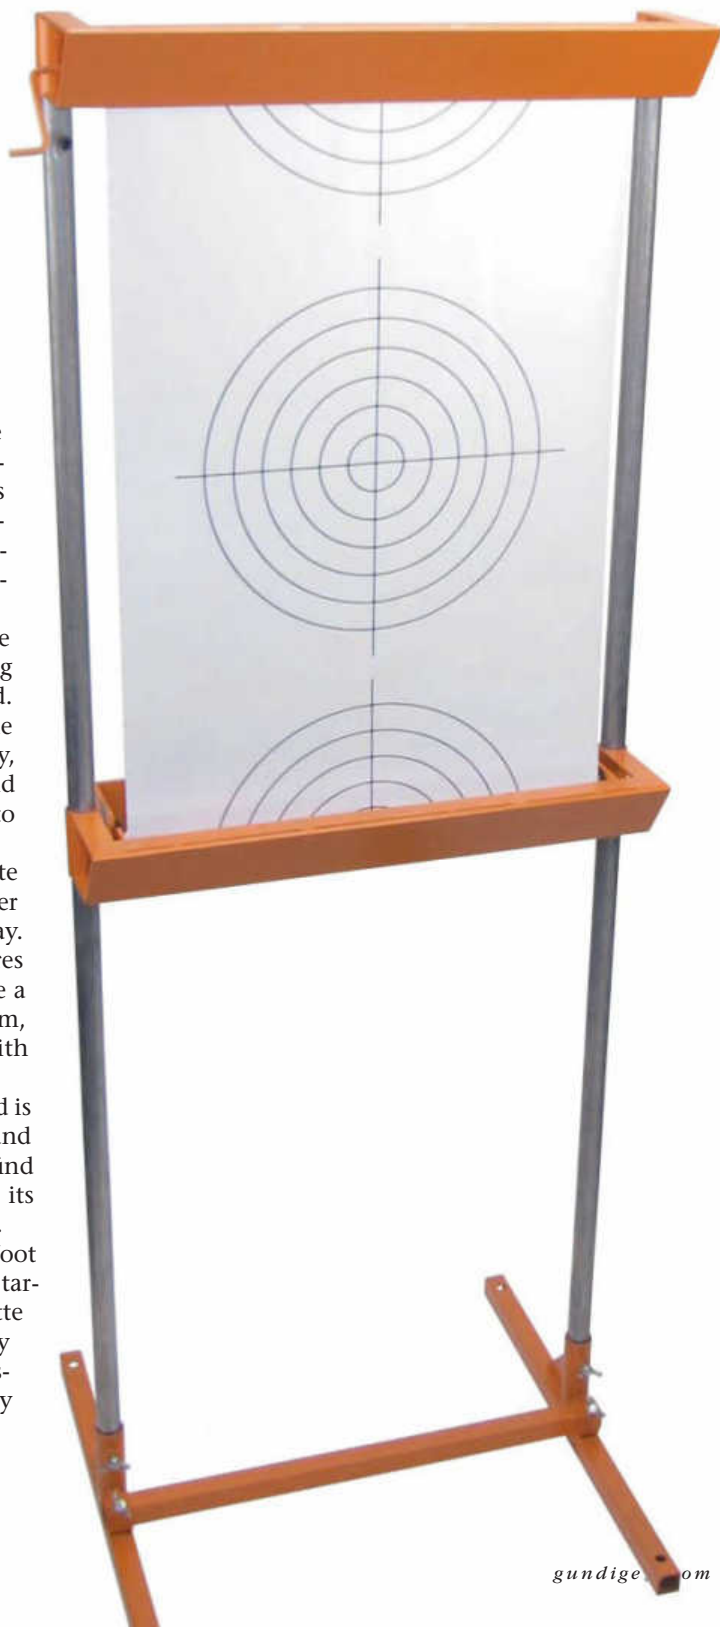

Of course, shooters will need plenty of targets to make full use of their rimfire firearms. Many shooters will purchase sheets of bullseye, varmint and other paper targets to facilitate their target shooting needs. While this is certainly an effective way to shoot, there are some downsides, especially if you shoot at a public range or at a private range where other shooters will be present.

Every time a shooter wants to put up new targets, he or she must wait until a ceasefire is called and the firing line goes cold to walk out to where the targets are located. Because of this, time can be wasted waiting for the line to go cold or walking out to place new targets. Luckily, Lyman has developed a new product that saves time and allows rimfire shooters to get the most out of their trips to the range.

Brand new for 2016, Lyman's Auto-Advance Remote Controlled Target System permits shooters to change over targets using a hand-held remote from up to 200 yards away. This means that shooters don't have to wait for ceasefires to swap targets or walk down to the target stand to place a new sheet. Remote activation operates a scroll-like system, removing the used target and conveniently replacing it with a fresh sheet.

The Auto-Advance Target System is battery-operated and is easy to assemble and disassemble for transportation to and from the range. The target system's stand utilizes easy-to-find and inexpensive standard electrical conduit tubing, and its protection plates are rated for use with all rimfire calibers.

Lyman's Auto-Advance Target System comes with a 50-foot roll of standard bullseye targets, and additional 50-foot target rolls are available with bullseye, animal and silhouette designs. This kind of remote target advancing has only previously been available in expensive industrial-type systems, but this system is available at a more price-friendly $229.95. Additional target rolls are $19.98 each. GDTM

.22 Long Rifle

Information available indicates that the .22 Long Rifle was developed by J. Stevens Arms & Tool Co. in 1887. It is the .22 Long case with a five-grain black-powder charge (likely with a granulation similar to what we would now call FFFfg), and a 40-grain bullet instead of the original 29-grain. The .22 Long Rifle is the most popular match cartridge in existence, and also the most widely used small-game and varmint cartridge. The high-velocity hollowpoint is the best field load and will do a good job on rabbit-sized animals out to 75 yards. Beyond that, it is unreliable. At close range, the high-velocity load with the solid-lead bullet will penetrate six inches of soft pine board and has a maximum range of nearly two miles. Maximum range is achieved at the relatively low angle of between 25 and 30 degrees, so one must be very careful.

At one time, the .22 Long Rifle was available in black-powder, semi-smokeless, and smokeless powder loads. Remington introduced the first high-velocity type, in 1930. The 40-grain solid and 36- and 38-grain hollowpoint bullet have been available for many years. The original case was not crimped, a feature that finally appeared in 1900. Space does not permit a full discussion of the different loads and types of .22 Long Rifle cartridges or the rifles and handguns that chamber it. GDTM

Best of Gun Digest: Handguns & Handgun Shooting Annual

By David Maccar, Editor

From the revolvers that won the old west to modern semiautomatic pistols for self defense, there are few firearms as celebrated as the handgun. And for the first time, Gun Digest is ready to tell its story in Best of Gun Digest: Handguns & Handgun Shooting. Drawing upon 70 years of expert gun writing from the Gun Digest annual, this volume explores the history, advancement and mystique of this indispensable tool. The 15 in-depth articles in the book study all aspects of modern and historic handguns, covering their roles in the firearms world, whether as a military sidearms, law-enforcement pistols or semi-autos meant for home defense. Quite simply, if it's about a pistol or revolver, it's in this book.

AIR APPARENT

SIG Sauer hits the market with a new line of air guns that might just be the wave of the future.

ERIC CONN

SIG Sauer's new air gun lineup includes the MCX (left) and P226 (right), as well as Match Ballistic pellets and targets.

New for 2016 with an official launch at the January SHOT Show in Las Vegas, SIG Sauer introduced its own line of air guns, designed to replicate already existing models in the SIG lineup. In advance of the show, we got our hands on a P226 and MCX, both in flat dark earth (FDE) and powered by CO₂. Currently there's also availability on an MPX and P250 handgun, while SIG expects to grow the number of offerings in the coming year.

SIG has been jumping into a lot of different sectors of the industry lately, including optics, suppressors, ammunition and now air guns. The air gun lineup has the opportunity to play an influential role in training and to reach non- or entry-level shooters looking to get into the sport. By offering nearly identical SIG models as air guns, everyone from first-time shooters to trained law enforcement or military professionals can improve their skills and range time at a fraction of the cost. Not only are pellets far less expensive than centerfire ammunition, the guns themselves come at a fraction of the price. Training, likewise, can be done in the backyard rather than at the range, saving shooters precious time and increasing the available hours for training.

In terms of pricing, the MCX starts at $221.99 (black, iron sights) and goes all the way up to $299 (FDE, with 1-4x24mm scope). There's also a middle-of-the-road option that includes a 20mm miniature red dot sight. The P226 air gun runs $110. Those are optimal price points for training purposes or introducing new shooters to the sport, especially when you consider the standard centerfire MCX has an MSRP of $1,866 and the P226 is about $1,100.

"Our incentive for moving in the direction of air guns was twofold," Dani Navickas, product manager of air guns at SIG Sauer, said. "We wanted to bridge the gap between non-shooters or hardcore air gun enthusiasts, and we also wanted to provide current shooters with premium air guns for training purposes."

Train Hard

There's always been a push by manufacturers to provide cheaper, alternative training methods to shooters, but that's especially true now with the rising price of ammunition. For a time, that led to the introduction of replica .22 rimfire models, but with ammo shortages that have lasted several years now, the logical jump was to the much cheaper air gun sector. A tin of 500 pellets can generally be had for less than $15, while a 10-pack of 12-gram CO₂ cartridges runs you less than $10.

The P226 air gun has the same basic controls as its centerfire counterpart.

SIG is offering two calibers, either .177 or .22, which are 5.25 and 8.87 grains, respectively, in the Match Ballistic Alloy. SIG also offers Crux, Wraith and Zero Point Ballistic Alloy pellets, which go all the way up to 12.35 grains. Along with pellets, SIG offers CO₂ pistol cartridges (12 gram) and rifle cartridges (88/92 gram), as well as stationary and spinning targets to make training more enjoyable. The metal targets are durable and come with replaceable stickers, and they can be easily placed in a backyard.

The P226 has been widely used in military and law enforcement circles and has a reputation for reliability and performance. The air gun version is no exception, featuring similar controls to the combat version of the centerfire handgun and weighing about the same (the centerfire weighs 34 ounces unloaded, while the air gun weighs 38 ounces). The P226 also features an all-metal frame and slide, lower Picatinny rail and blowback action. A much slimmer magazine releases with the same control style and location, while the safety selector serves as safety and decocker. The CO₂ cartridge (12 gram) tucks under a trap door in the rear of the grip handle.

The magazine features two rotating cylinders at each end, so when one side runs out you eject the magazine and insert the other end. Each cylinder carries eight pellets, giving you a total of 16 per magazine. The .177-caliber pellets are a bit difficult to stuff into place, even with my fairly normal-sized hands, but SIG does include a small punch to help seat pellets properly. SIG doesn't yet make a speed loader, but they are available and make the process much quicker.

For testing, I set up SIG's Quad Shooting Gallery in the backyard and shot from multiple locations around my deck and yard. The P226 was accurate and fun to shoot, and after seven or eight magazines I had no feeding or functionality issues. We've got snow on the ground, so it's easy to see the powder splash when a pellet misses the target; this is particularly ideal because it allows you to evaluate trigger control and proper grip mechanics during the shooting process.

I also included my 8-year-old in the fun, which allowed me to coach him on gun safety, muzzle control and proper loading techniques. He's not done a ton of shooting at this point in his life, so an air gun is the perfect entry-level training tool—there's basically no recoil or loud noise, so it allows him to focus on the fundamental mechanics of shooting, and it allows me to coach him through the process. It affords us more time to train, too, because we don't have to drive to a range or plow through spendy ammunition. On top of all that, SIG's target systems provide for a fun and enjoyable shooting experience in the privacy of your own backyard.

MCX

Running on the larger 88-gram CO₂ cartridges (yes, these are identical to the 92-gram labeled variety) and replicating the new-for-2015 MCX, the air gun version features a mock-silencer with fixed buttstock. The version I tested came in FDE with a 1-4x24mm optic, though the gun is also available in black and with red dot or iron sights. The air gun version was extremely accurate when playing backyard commando, and I was easily smacking metal targets out to 25 yards.

The MCX features a 30-round belted magazine, which is fantastic for shooting but a pain in the butt to reload. A speed loader, as mentioned above, would make the process much quicker, but without any assistance it takes several minutes of nimble finger work to get that bad boy loaded. Performance-wise, it ran without fault. The MCX weighs about 6 pounds without optic and features an 18-inch barrel (rifled, steel) with KeyMod, plastic/composite handguard. The 88-gram CO₂ canister fits in the buttstock, normally where your buffer components would be.

Parting Shots

SIG has taken a leading role in the industry with its reliable designs and innovative concepts, like those you find on the MCX and P320. Its air gun lineup is no different, pairing replica builds with an air gun platform that provides accuracy and reliability. Both the MCX and P226 air gun variants we tested were fun to shoot and amazingly similar in design and weight to their centerfire counterparts. They provide an optimal solution for cost effective training and are great for a little backyard fun. As a kid I echoed Ralphie's obsession with the Red Ryder BB gun in "A Christmas Story," but I've got to say SIG's new lineup of air guns are enough to make even a grown man drool and daydream in ways the old Red Ryder never could. GDTM

RIMFIRE RENAISSANCE

The Savage A17 was the first reliable, affordable, non-AR-style .17 HMR repeater, and it has done quite well. In 2016, look for a .22 Magnum version as well.

Whether you're in the market for a competition target gun, a defensive firearm or a rifle capable of taking small game out to 200 yards, today's crop of refined rimfires has you covered.

BRAD FITZPATRICK

In the late 1990s and early 2000s there wasn't a lot of discussion about rimfire guns and their impact on the shooting industry. Sure, everyone knew that rimfires made great plinking guns, that they worked to dispatch varmints and small predators at moderate ranges, and that they were a great way to introduce new shooters to the sport. And the early 2000s even gave shooters a couple new rimfires to play with, the .17 HMR and .17 Mach II. But rimfires were just an afterthought, it seemed, a small subset of the market made up of backyard shooting enthusiasts who weren't willing to spend the kind of money it took to play in the centerfire world.

By the late 2000s, however, no one doubted how impactful rimfires were on the firearms and ammunition industry. When the ammo craze struck around 2010, the first product to disappear from store shelves was rimfire ammo, particularly .22 Long Rifle. Consumers couldn't understand why rimfire ammunition reserves were so depleted and blamed manufacturers, but the manufacturers I spoke with at that time were completely overwhelmed and were pouring out rimfire ammunition as quickly as it could be manufactured. Production was increased and ammo manufacturers invested in new machinery and more workers to meet the need of consumers; private individuals who had .22 ammunition were selling it at dramatically increased prices. The little rimfire cartridges, it turned out, controlled a very big stake in the shooting industry.

Rimfires get their name from the fact that the priming mixture that ignites the powder in a cartridge is contained within the rim rather than in a primer, as is the case with centerfires. The result is a low-cost, easy-to-manufacture cartridge that produces little recoil and less noise than its centerfire counterparts. But this design places pressure limitations on rimfire rounds, so rimfires are limited in the amount of energy they can generate.

I've already mentioned that rimfires offer an opportunity for low-cost, low-recoil fun at the range, but thanks to improvements in cartridge design and bullet construction, today's rimfires are more versatile than ever before. Here's a look at some of the best rimfire cartridges available today, cartridges that can accomplish tasks from backyard plinking to dedicated varmint hunting and even self-defense. No matter what you're looking for in a rimfire, there's a cartridge on this list that has you covered.

.22 Long Rifle

The .22 Long Rifle is one of the oldest cartridges in use today, with a history dating back to 1887, and it is without a doubt the most popular cartridge in the world in terms of retail sales. Annual production numbers are estimated to be somewhere north of 2 billion rounds of ammunition, substantially eclipsing every other sporting cartridge in terms of popularity and use.

Though bullets with grain weights from 20 to 60 grains are available for

The rimfires tend to be lighter than centerfire rifles, and that's a good thing if you are hunting and making multiple set-ups. This .17 HMR Ruger works very well on fox, and it's light enough to carry all day.

the .22, the 30- to 40-grain projectiles are by far the most common. Bullets are available for a variety of configurations, from all-lead to full metal jacket and hollow point. In addition, there is a great level of disparity regarding velocities, which I witnessed first-hand a few years ago when I was doing a comprehensive test of rimfire semi-automatic pistols. In that test, I had five different loads from five different manufacturers which, from any given pistol, would produce velocity figures that varied by as much as 500 feet per second (fps). Considering those bullets were only leaving the barrel between roughly 800 and 1,300 fps, that's a very considerable difference.

There are a wide variety of rifles and handguns chambered in .22 LR. On the rifle side, there are slide-action, lever action, semi-automatics, bolt actions, falling-block single shots, and even a few double guns. The design of the .22 LR allows it to be loaded safely in tubular magazines, which are common on repeaters. On the handgun side, there are a variety of semi-automatic blowback designs (meaning the breech is not locked and the action is operated based on gas pressure from the fired cartridge), single- and double-action revolvers and even a few single shots like the Thompson/Center Contender. In addition, in recent years more companies have begun offering conversion kits that allow shooters to transform their center-fire AR rifle or semi-automatic pistol into a .22 rimfire for cheap, low-recoil practice.

So, what can you do with a .22? For starters, .22s are extremely fun to shoot at the range and, now that ammo reserves are back up, they're relatively cheap. I've also used a .22 for hunting, particularly rabbits and squirrels, and they are great for dispatching rats around waste sites and agricultural areas. In addition, the use of .22 "trainers" has become common, and that's a good thing. In between range sessions with fast, magnum centerfires, I will sometimes switch to a .22 bolt gun, which mimicks the larger centerfire, to help protect myself from flinch and practice trigger pull.

.17 HMR and .17 Mach II

The .17 HMR (Hornady Magnum Rim-

The .17 HMR (left) is a necked-down version of the .22 Magnum (on right). Both of these cartridges are versatile and accurate, and both have the energy and trajectory to make versatile small-game cartridges.

The .22 Mag. is becoming a popular self-defense round, and Hornady is actually offering a load for the .22 Mag. in their Critical Defense line. This is the North American Arms Pug, which is an extremely light, compact defensive revolver chambered in .22 WMR.

fire) was introduced in 2002, and it has continued to grow in popularity ever since. Based on a necked-down .22 WMR case, the Hornady produces velocities around 2,550 fps, substantially more than either the .22 Magnum or the .22 LR (both of which primarily use heavier 30- or 40-grain bullets). That means better trajectories, too; the .17 HMR with a 17-grain Hornady V-Max bullet is only 8.5 inches low at 200 yards when sighted in dead-on at 100. Within that range the .17 is a fabulous small game and varmint cartridge, and it will work on smaller predators as well with minimal pelt damage. After tagging out on a whitetail deer hunt in Texas, my guide, Tom, and I set out to do a little predator calling in the last days of the hunt. The area had very few coyotes but was absolutely overrun with gray fox, and on our first setup we had two foxes respond to the call within five minutes. In the interest of hide preservation, Tom opted to use a Ruger rifle in .17 HMR, and each head shot he took stopped the fox in its tracks without any damage to the valuable fur farther back on the body. The .17 HMR is ideal for that type of application, and because rifles weigh very little, it was easy to pack our light rimfires around all day as we waited for foxes to break cover. Also, and though I can't say for certain because of a lack of side-by-side evidence, I believe that the sound of a rimfire .17 isn't as likely to turn predators as the crack of a .22-250. I have noticed that you get more doubles with fox using a .17 than a larger centerfire. It could be coincidence, but I don't think so.

The .17 Mach II, based on a necked-down .22 LR cartridge, hasn't fared quite so well. It's still a fantastic little target and vermin cartridge, and .22 LR guns can simply be re-barreled in many cases to fire the .17 Mach II, but the little cartridge (another of Hornady's cartridges) hasn't fared well in the face of overwhelming competition from its parent cartridge. Nevertheless, the little .17 Mach II offers virtually no recoil and a relatively powerful bite, pushing a 15.5-grain bullet at 2,050 fps. That's wringing just about all the energy possible from a bullet of that weight, but as cool as the Mach II is, it isn't as popular as the ubiquitous .22 LR or the .17 HMR. Still, if you have a rifle in this caliber and some ammo, you're ready for hours of fun at the range.

The .17 HMR works well on varmints up to and including foxes, as evidenced by this clean one-shot kill on a Texas gray fox at 50 yards. The accurate .17 allows for precision shooting, important for pelt preservation.

The Savage A17 is a reliable, affordable, accurate .17 HMR repeater, the first of its kind. It uses a rotary magazine and a special delayed blowback system that works well with the .17 cartridge.

Most rifles for these cartridges are bolt-actions, but Savage introduced their A17 semi-auto blowback gun last year, to rave reviews. Making the .17 HMR work in a semi-auto has been quite a challenge, but Savage accomplished this with a total redesign of the rimfire blowback action that allows pressures to drop before cycling, creating smooth, consistent extraction, ejection and feeding. Bolt-action .17s are available from CZ, Savage, Ruger, Browning and others.

.22 WMR

The .22 Winchester Magnum Rimfire, or simply the .22 Magnum, as it's so often called, broke cover in 1959, and it stands at the top of the rimfire .22 class in terms of power and trajectory. The .22 Mag. can achieve velocities of more than 1,700 fps with 50-grain projectiles, and with lighter 30-grain loads it hovers around 2,250 fps from most rifles. Energy-wise, it can do things that other rimfires simply can't. It shoots flat enough and carries enough energy that some (but not all) coyote hunters consider it a functional cartridge for 'yotes at moderate ranges, say 150 yards or less. It produces less muzzle blast and recoil than the centerfire .22s, and rifles are light and easy to transport. In addition, .22 Mag. ammunition is cheaper than centerfire varmint loads in almost all cases.

Aside from being a hunting cartridge, the .22 Mag. is also a pretty accurate target round as well. With a good rifle you can expect sub-MOA accuracy, and the .22 Mag. is a pleasure to shoot. It's also been incorporated into revolver platforms, and there are a number of people who carry .22 WMR revolvers for self-defense. Hornady got behind the movement by offering a Critical Defense load for the .22 Mag. Although it's at the bottom of the energy spectrum for a defensive load, it's easy to shoot because recoil is so light; I sometimes carry a North American Arms Pug, which has a 1-inch barrel and can be concealed in almost any clothing, and the recoil from this pipsqueak of a gun is negligible. There are also a number of double-action revolvers chambered for this round, and right or not, there are a growing number of CCW permit holders packing .22 Mag. rimfires.

The majority of .22 Magnums, though, are rifles, and there's good reason to love this round. It bests the .22 LR in terms of energy and velocity and is more versatile, yet it doesn't climb into the same class as the centerfire .22s in terms of cost, recoil, gun weight, and the like. There are a number of bolt-action rifles available in .22 Mag., and for 2016, Savage is introducing their A22, which is the cousin of the A17, which will be an affordable and undoubtedly accurate rimfire repeater.

THE GREATEST RIMFIRE REPEATER

When I was 10 years old, my dad bought me a Ruger 10/22, and oh, how I loved that gun. It wasn't fancy, with its plain stock and utilitarian black plastic buttstock, but my, did it shoot. The 10/22 is certainly one of the best-selling and best rimfire designs of all time, thanks to a time-tested blowback action that simply gobbles up everything you feed it, a slick rotary magazine design, and accuracy that belies its affordable asking price. Plus, there are few guns that are easier to accessorize than the 10/22, and parts are relatively affordable; I took that original rifle and replaced the barrel with a heavy target model with a .920-inch diameter, then switched the plain stock out for a Hogue model. I also added a new trigger, and suddenly my 10/22 went from a very accurate factory gun to a semi-custom rifle that fired one-ragged-hole groups. The best part? You can buy and accessorize your Ruger for less than the price of many scopes, and you can be confident that you're getting a gun that will run and run for years to come.

.17 WSM

The .17 Winchester Super Magnum (WSM), began life as a .27-caliber nail gun cartridge. In 2012, the engineers at Winchester took that nail gun cartridge and necked it down to hold .17-inch bullets, and thus the .17 WSM was born. The .17 WSM is now the hottest rimfire in the world, capable of driving a 20-grain bullet at 3,000 fps and producing a very flat trajectory curve; when sighted in at 100 yards a 20-grain Hornady V-Max bullet strikes just 4.1 inches low at 200 yards. That means this is a rimfire that could provide hold-on-target ballistics out to 200 paces, a revolutionary achievement.

The .17 WSM produces energy levels that make it a viable candidate for a predator cartridge. Indeed, that .17-inch, 20-grain bullet would be a great projectile for shooting coyotes if you plan to sell the pelt. The .17 WSM is relatively limited in ammo selection compared to the other rimfires, and there are only a handful of rifles chambered for the cartridge right now (the Savage B-Mag being one, the Winchester 1885 Rimfire another). But Savage is planning to expand their B-Mag line, and that means that affordable, accurate .17 guns will be available in a variety of configurations. Though noise and recoil are less than comparable centerfires, the .17 WSM is likely not a cartridge that people will buy strictly as a target gun. For hunting prairie dogs, fox, ground squirrels, rabbits, woodchucks, and, yes, even coyotes at moderate ranges, this rifle is a good bet. GDTM

LRWEIGHT PLINKER

Ruger's 22/45 Lite is an accurate, lightweight and fast-shooting rimfire pistol that's now available with a sharp, OD green finish.

JIM GRANT

The new Ruger 22/45 Lite features an OD green finish and comes ready-made for customization.

Ruger's reputation as the king of rimfire is well deserved. For decades it has produced affordable, accurate plinkers, varmint rifles and handguns. Countless shooters made their entry into the world of shooting with a Ruger rimfire handgun. Indeed, my first rimfire pistol was a bull-barrel stainless MK II. While I love this handgun for reasons equal parts nostalgia and objective appreciation, it does have a few shortcomings.

The grip angle is comfortable and works well but doesn't directly translate to any centerfire handgun other than a P08 Parabellum or Nambu—neither are suitable home defense or competition pistols. Additionally, the European heel-type magazine release doesn't lend itself to expedient magazine changes.

Ruger addressed both of these concerns with the introduction of its 22/45 and MK III series of handguns. Yet two additional minor concerns remained as my shooting tastes evolved: weight and suppressor compatibility.

All-steel Ruger MK II and MK III pistols are hefty pieces of equipment, especially with a bull barrel. While the 22/45 series of handguns does much to relieve this, replacing the steel lower assembly with a polymer one, the pistol becomes nose heavy and tiresome to hold on target. My other issue with Ruger's prolific plinker is its inability to readily accept muzzle devices like suppressors and compensators. At least, that was the case until the recent release of the Ruger 22/45 Lite.

The Ruger 22/45 is a semi-automatic, single-action-only, direct blowback pistol chambered in .22 LR. It feeds from a single-stack box-type magazine containing 10 rounds of ammunition, and it ships with two in the box. One thing I personally love about these magazines is the loading assist nub.

This little button protrudes through a vertical witness cut running nearly the length of the magazine body. It's directly attached to the follower, and allows shooters to release pressure from the top most round, thus permitting effortless loading of cartridges. One thing to note, though, is despite the similarity to the Ruger MK III magazines, the 22/45 Lite cannot use them without modification. However, the new 22/45 can use all magazines intended for other versions of the 22/45 pistol.

The new Ruger gets the Lite portion of its name from the incorporation of a few weight-reducing improvements to the design. The receiver is constructed from aerospace-grade aluminum, which provides comparable strength to steel at a fraction of the weight.

Additionally, the barrel shroud is ventilated, shaving a few extra ounces off the design while providing additional airflow to the barrel. This is important, because as the barrel heats up

The author enjoyed the loading assist nub, which takes pressure off the top round for easy loading.

The author attached a Griffin Armament Checkmate QD suppressor to the 22/45 Lite.

While the pistol's front sight is fixed, its rear sight is adjustable.

The Ruger 22/45 Lite comes with a threaded barrel for attaching a muzzle devices.

from shooting, the material expands and shifts the point of impact. The added ventilation allows heat from the barrel to quickly dissipate, preserving accuracy.

This new featherweight aluminum receiver is available in a number of anodized colors, including blue, red, black and the olive drab model reviewed. The lower receivers are constructed from high-impact Zytel polymer and, while normally all black, some distributor exclusives offer atypical camouflage patterns like Muddy Girl.

One unexpected benefit of the 22/45's use of an M1911-style lower assembly is its capability to accept standard 1911 grip panels. This effectively opens the pistol up to an exhaustive selection of aftermarket grips. However, the left side grip panel does require minor modification to fit, due to the location of its safety and slide release lever.

The 1911 influences don't end there. The Ruger 22/45 Lite also features a serrated front strap and flat 1911-inspired backstrap. As someone who learned to shoot on a government-sized 1911, the pistol felt immediately familiar and comfortable.

I really enjoyed the grip angle and material, though I wish the included panels were a tad thicker; as it stands, the grip is so narrow it doesn't properly fill the swell of a shooter's palm. Given that the pistol is chambered in .22LR, the recoil-absorbing benefits of this are negligible.

Even still, the Ruger points very well. Bringing the pistol to target was extremely quick, and not simply because of its lightweight construction. The grip angle and generously sized post and notch iron sights make target acquisition lightning fast.

The sights are also the perfect height to clear most muzzle devices attached to the pistol's 1/2x28mm threaded barrel. Shooters preferring reflex sights can utilize the included scope rail attached to the pre-tapped receiver.

Personally, I'm not a tremendous fan of optic-equipped pistols. I generally find they impede fast shooting, not enhance or accelerate it. I make an exception for Ruger MK II/III pistols and their derivatives, simply because I have won bullseye pistol matches with them outfitted with optics. I don't know if they promote faster shooting, but the Ruger MK III series of handguns are definitely easier to shoot accurately with an optic.

I had a chance to run a few different types of ammo through the Ruger 22/45 Lite OD green and found that it ran flawlessly with most types. A few specialty rounds like the Aguila Super Colibrí wouldn't always feed, but even the massive 60-grain SSS subsonic rounds fed and functioned perfectly.

As cliché as it sounds, the 22/45 was an absolute tack-driver; I expected nothing less from the platform. Ruger attributes this inherent accuracy to the inline bolt design, but it's mostly the result of two influences. The barrel is very well made, and, equally as important, it doesn't move.

Because the Ruger is a direct blow-back pistol, the bolt is locked simply by spring pressure, nothing else. This is also why the 22/45 makes such a great suppressor host. Because the barrel is stationary, the weight of the suppressor doesn't affect the action's functionality. Thus, it doesn't require a recoil booster to cycle properly.

I confirmed this with a Griffin Arment Checkmate QD suppressor, provided by SilencerShop. Even with the sound suppressor installed, the pistol ran perfectly. I later used the pistol in this configuration to teach a few new shooters how to properly use a handgun. Since the pistol was quiet enough to use without hearing protection, the students better understood my instruction. This, combined with the minimal recoil of .22 LR rounds, made for an effective teaching tool.

The new colors available on these pistols may be a little wild, but at the core they're still the rock-solid handguns developed by Bill Ruger half a century ago. Many folks believe old world quality is dead, but Ruger proves once again it can offer solid firearms with modern features and rugged over-built quality not normally found on guns at this price point. GDTM

1 SAVAGE A22 MAGNUM

Savage made headlines last year when it introduced the A17, an innovative, one-of-a-kind auto loading .17 HMR. The gun maker is doing it again with the introduction of the A22, a .22 Magnum auto-loading rimfire built on the A17's platform. It features the same delayed blowback action that made the A17 an instant hit. It comes with a 10-round rotary magazine, a button-rifled barrel, a composite stock and Savage's AccuTrigger trigger system. ($473; SavageArms.com)

2 SIG SAUER P250-22

Who needs four or five pistols when you can have a SIG P250-22? OK, that was a dumb question. Still, the P250-22 is chambered in .22 LR and is identical in size and weight to the P250 centerfire models, making it a great practice gun for cost-conscious shooters. The real beauty in this gun is its ability to be converted into a variety of centerfire calibers. It can also be converted to a compact or subcompact pistol with SIG's X-Change kits. The 250 comes with a double-action trigger, making it a great target or service gun. It comes with a 10-round magazine and weighs 21.2 ounces. ($434; SIGSauer.com)

3 RUGER 10/22 TAKEDOWN

The ubiquitous 10/22 has been a fixture in the shooting arena for many years. The 10/22 Takedown isn't new, either, but Ruger just introduced a new version of the Takedown. This one comes with a fluted target barrel complete with muzzle threading and a threading protector. It also features Ruger's modular stock system, which comes with two butt attachments. The Takedown comes with a 10-round rotary magazine, a combination scope base adapter and a durable carrying case. ($629; Ruger.com)

4 WEBLEY & SCOTT RIMFIRE RIFLE

Few gun makers have such a storied and respected history as Webley & Scott. Available in both standard and a carbon/Kevlar wrapped bull barrel, the company's new bolt-action rimfire is available in .17 HMR. Both models come with a 10-round, detachable, rotary magazine, a skeleton trigger, a durable and practical composite stock, a Picatinny rail mounted above the receiver and a threaded 19-inch barrel with a knurled cap. ($463 for the bull barrel, $362 for the standard; LegacySports.com)

5 SIG SAUER P226 AIRGUN

SIG's new line of Advanced Sport Pellet airguns will not only save you money, they'll make you a better shot. And you'll have a blast, too. The P226 is available in .177 caliber, shoots up to 510 feet per second (fps) and runs off a CO2 cartridge. It comes in flat dark earth or black and features the same blowback action as a standard centerfire semi-auto. They also have the same weight, trigger pull and feel as SIG's centerfire pistols. It comes with a fixed rear sight, a front blade sight, a 16-round rotary magazine, a rifled barrel, an auto decocking feature and an accessory rail for a laser sight or flashlight. ($90; SIGSauer.com)

6 SMITH & WESSON M&P 15-22 SPORT II

An updated version of its popular and reliable M&P 15-22 Sport, the Smith & Wesson M&P 15-22 Sport II now comes with a slimmer, ergonomic forend that has M-LOK attachments. It still has a Picatinny rail on top and an adjustable stock. The gun's sights are updated to Magpul MBUS folding sights, and it comes with one 25-round magazine where legal. It's available in basic black, Kryptek Highlander or Muddy Girl patterns. State compliant versions are also available, which include a fixed stock and a standard 10-round magazine. ($449; Smith-Wesson.com)

7 SMITH & WESSON SW22 VICTORY

Accuracy freaks rejoice! Smith & Wesson's newest rimfire incorporates all the features target shooters demand from a gun suitable for competition. This .22 LR pistol comes with a match-grade, interchangeable, 5½-inch target barrel that comes off with a simple, one-screw design. The single-action, blowback semi-auto comes with a fiber optic front sight and an adjustable fiber optic rear sight. It also features an adjustable trigger stop, a single-side thumb safety and a magazine release. ($409; Smith-Wesson.com)

8 GAMO MAGNUM AIR RIFLE

The newest addition to the Gamo lineup, the Magnum Air Rifle features the most powerful IGT MACH 1 ever made. Because of this, the rifle can deliver incredible velocities up to 1,650 fps in the .177-caliber version and 1,300 fps in the .22-caliber variant. The rifle retains the smooth cocking action and reduced vibration of the IGT MACH 1 piston while delivering increased power, a real boon for serious air gunners. The Magnum incorporates a new all-weather thumbhole black stock with rubberized grips; a two-stage, fully adjustable Gamo trigger; and a 3-9x40 with adjustable objective scope. ($299.99; GamoUSA.com)

9 BENJAMIN MAXIMUS

Benjamin's newest pre-charged pneumatic air rifle is designed as an entry-level gun, but even experts will like it. The Maximus is available in .177-caliber, which has a velocity up to 1,000 fps, and .22-caliber, which has a maximum velocity of 900 fps. Both calibers are suitable for plinking as well as small game hunting. The Maximus features an on-board pressure gauge and has a maximum fill pressure of 2,000 psi, which can deliver up to 30 shots. It comes with a single-stage trigger, and the action is machined to accept dovetail optic mounts. ($199.99; Crosman.com)

10 AIR VENTURI WING SHOT

Air Venturi has been generating some serious buzz in the airgunning community with the reveal of its new Wing Shot air shotgun. The single-shot airgun is a Pre-Charged Pneumatic (PCP) that can function as either an air rifle or an air shotgun when using Air Venturi's .50-caliber shotshells loaded with No. 6 or No. 8 shot. Velocities with the No. 8 shotshells extend to around 1,130 fps, while velocities with .50-caliber bullets are closer to 760 fps. Weighing in at less than 7.5 pounds, the Wing Shot features an ambidextrous hardwood stock, a rubber butt pad, a crisp two-stage trigger, a beaded front sight and even a removable choke. ($749.99; PyramidAir.com)

The Great Debate .17 HMR vs. WSM

With lighter, faster projectiles, .17-caliber rimfires such as the .17 WSM and .17 HMR offer some advantages over more established rimfires like the .22 Long Rifle.

PHIL MASSARO

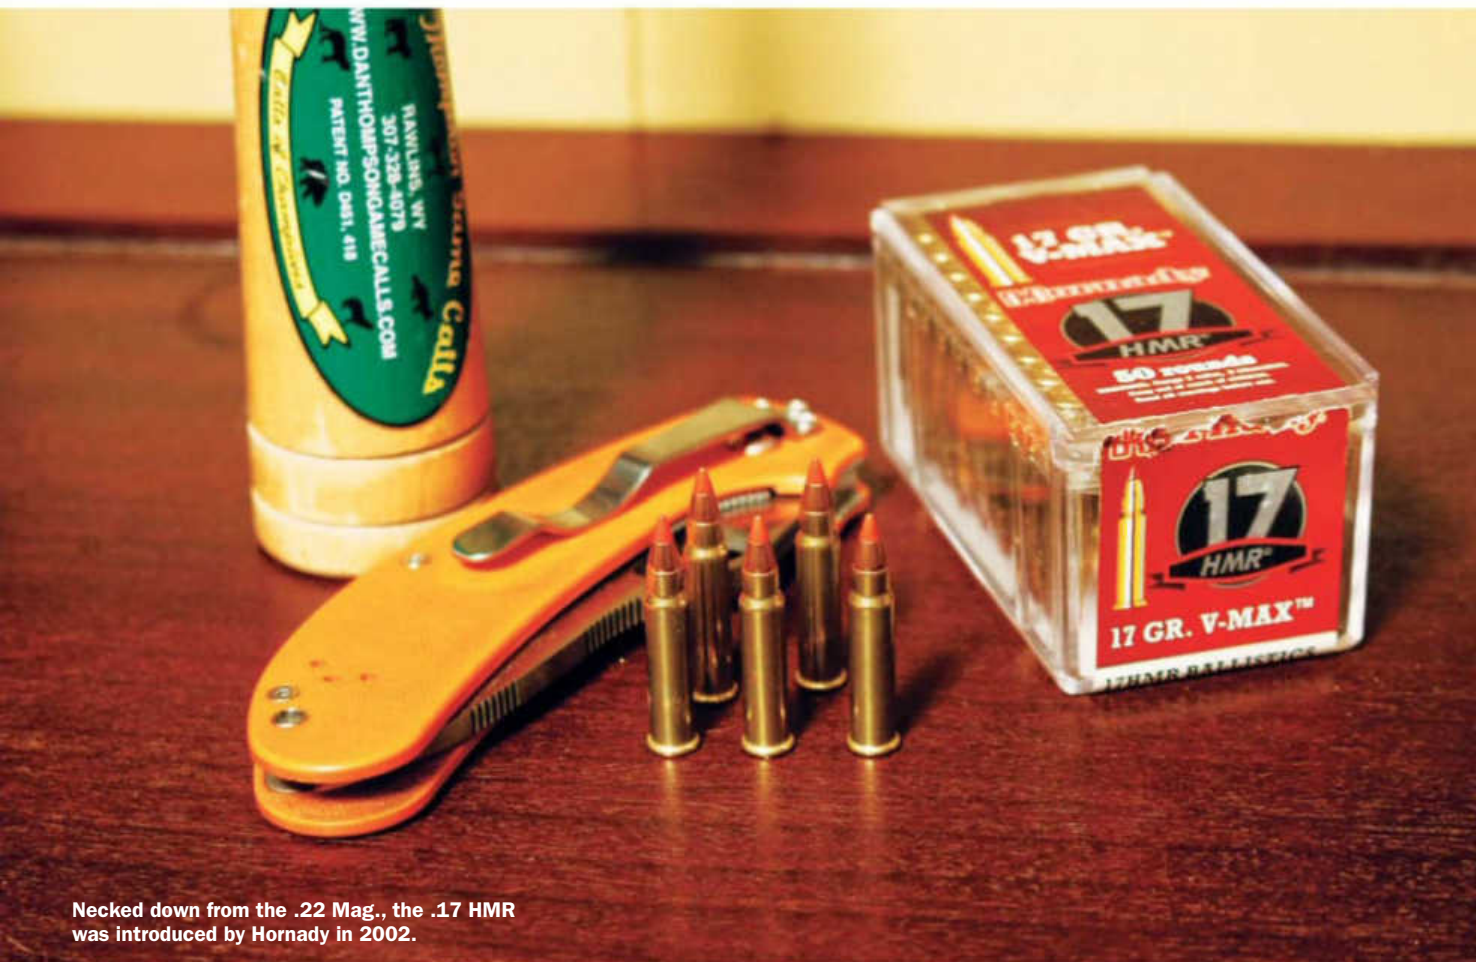

Undoubtedly, the majority of our hunting careers were sparked by an experience with the .22 Long Rifle cartridge; it has become a ubiquitous icon in the youth of any shooting upbringing. The simple rimfire design, coupled with a complete lack of recoil, has been used to teach generations of marksmen how to properly hit a bullseye and to put meat on the table, no matter how small the portions may have been.

However, just as the .22 LR was an evolution of the .22 Short and .22 Long that preceded the legendary design, the .22 Winchester Rimfire Magnum became an upgrade of the .22 LR, giving greater velocities and more striking energy. In 2002, ballisticians at Hornady decided it was high time to shake things up and neck the .22 Magnum down to .17 caliber; the .17 Hornady

Magnum Rimfire (HMR) arrived with much fanfare. It would utilize a 17-grain spitzer bullet, driven to 2,550 feet per second (fps) for a flat trajectory, flatter than any rimfire that had come before. The new, hyper-velocity cartridge was an instant success, and even though the tiny bullet was extremely sensitive to wind drift, many hunters flocked to the gun shops for a new cartridge to play with. The .17 HMR is a very accurate cartridge, fully capable of taking headshots on squirrels and other small targets, as well as extending the effective range of the rimfire rifle on distant woodchucks, coyotes and foxes. It was followed, two years later, by the .17 Hornady Mach II, based on the CCI Stinger variant of the .22 LR cartridge.

Fast-forward a decade and you'd see the great firm of Winchester as busy as a beehive, hard at work releasing the .17 Winchester Super Magnum (WSM). Having seen the success of Hornady cartridges, Winchester created a cartridge based on, of all things, the .27-caliber nail gun blank—used for driving nails in concrete and other hard surfaces. For three years, the wizards at Winchester secretly toiled away in their towers—with some help from the sages at Savage—crafting a rimfire cartridge that would achieve unprecedented velocities, and upon release to the shooting public, lived up to its goals. The .17 WSM drives a 20-grain bullet to an even 3,000 fps and a 26-grain bullet to 2,600 fps.

How do the two compare and contrast? And for what hunting/shooting situations are they best suited? Well, let's get this statement out of the way: They aren't as economical or available as the good ol' .22 LR, and while both of the cartridges have a velocity and trajectory advantage over the reigning rimfire cartridge, it's going to be very difficult to become a threat to the crown. Being rimfire, and therefore virtually un-reloadable, the cartridges are a one-and-done proposition. But, for the hunter who wants a rifle that can reach out for the occasional 150-yard shot, without the report of the smaller centerfires—like the .17 Hornet and .17 Remington—the .17-caliber rimfires have an appeal. While the .17 Hornet—one of the slower centerfires of this caliber—bests the velocity of the .17 WSM by 650 fps, the rimfire .17s fill a needed void.

Those tiny .172-inch diameter pills will certainly get the job done on the smaller game animals such as squirrels and rabbits, as well as the furbearing mammals like foxes, bobcats and even coyotes, at closer ranges. For the fur hunter, these little bullets with their high velocity and light sectional density figures will help minimize pelt damage. They both make a bit of noise;

being supersonic, they probably aren't the best choice for shooting garden pests while trying to go unnoticed. But in a situation where you don't want a high velocity bullet sailing out of control, the .17 HMR and .17 WSM provide a relatively flat trajectory, yet with a highly frangible bullet that significantly reduces the risk of an errant bullet causing harm.

Let's take a look at the differences between the .17 HMR and the .17 WSM in some real-world situations. Hornady makes ammunition for both cartridges, so to keep things even, I'll use their stuff for the basis of the comparison. Both of these cartridges are fully capable of maintaining a 100-yard zero, without the midrange trajectory becoming ridiculous. Using a 20-grain bullet loaded in both cartridges you'll find the .17 WSM with a V-Max bullet hits 4.10 inches low at 200 yards, while the .17 HMR loaded with a 20-grain XTP hollowpoint hits just under 10 inches low at the same distance. Now, while the WSM needs just a touch of holdover at two-hundy, the HMR needs some careful attention out past 125 yards. Not that the shot is impossible, but the holdover becomes crucial, especially on the smaller targets.

Wind can be an absolute nemesis to any .17-caliber cartridge, be it centerfire or rimfire. The bullets simply lack the weight to defy the effects of crosswind, and learning how to dope the wind with any of these rifles will test the mettle of any rifleman. That being said, it's a matter of simple physics to explain that all bullets of equal shape and weight will drop at the same rate. With that in mind, the faster a bullet travels, the more ground it will cover before that drop occurs, hence the trajectory advantage of the WSM cartridge. If you are looking for a rimfire cartridge that has the capability to reach-out-and-touch-someone, I feel that the .17 WSM has the advantage. If you like a cartridge with more choices in the bullet weight department, perhaps the .17 HMR is your baby. Hornady loads the 15.5-grain NTX, 17-grain V-Max and the 20-grain hollowpoint XTP.

The .17 HMR has less long-range capability than the WSM, but more to offer by way of bullet selection.

In either case, the faster .17 rimfires will provide a definitive advantage over the .22 LR, and in certain circumstances even over the .22 Mag. Even though the .17s are a specialty case, requiring their own special cleaning rods and patches, they are a ton of fun to shoot and very effective in the field. GDTM

Whether HMR or WSM, both .17s are great for small game excursions.

Is the .22 Shortage Over?

While other ammo supplies have become more available, rimfire availability is still nowhere near what it once was on shelves across the country.

DAVID HART

Good news, shooters. The shelves at your local gun store are full of ammo. Everything from 9mm and .380 to .45ACP and .223 fills slots that sat empty for weeks at a time a year ago. Even better, many gun stores have lifted purchase limits. Buy all you want. Shoot it up and buy some more.

The only thing missing? Rimfire ammo.

"No way," said Clark Brothers Gun Shop clerk Ken Greene when asked if the rimfire shortage is abating. "We are still getting it in drips and drabs. .22 Magnum is non-existent and Long Rifle is still in short supply. It seems like we get about 10 percent of what we order."

Although he admits it's little more than hearsay, Greene has heard rimfire manufacturers are afraid to add necessary infrastructure to increase production beyond current capacity.

"They don't want to put all that extra money into the equipment only to have demand slow to where it was before people started buying so much ammo," Greene said.

Whether he's right or wrong is unknown. Ammo makers are reluctant to offer such information. When they do, it tends to be vague.

"The current market and environment is causing stronger than usual demand for products in our industry," said one ammo manufacturer's representative via email. "The current increase in demand is attributed to the civilian market. Our facilities operate 24 hours a day. We are continually making process improvements to increase our efficiency and investing in capital and personnel where we have sustained demand. We are bringing additional capacity online again this year."

Other manufacturers have increased production as much as they can, as well, according to National Shooting Sports Foundation (NSSF) spokesman Mike Bazinet. The NSSF does not have volume figures for rimfire ammo, but Bazinet doesn't think demand for it is on par with demand a year or two ago.

"We have heard reports of scattered shortages of .22 Long Rifle on a spot basis in some markets," he said, "but what we are hearing about is nothing like we experienced in 2013 when consumer demand created a self-perpetuating shortage."

Carl Denton, a clerk at Tulsa, Oklahoma's Sports World, says their market has loosened up some, but availability still varies. His store no longer limits purchase amounts for rimfire, but they used to limit customers to one or two boxes, depending on inventory.

"We don't ration anymore," said Denton. "However, .22 Magnum is all but impossible to find. I'm not sure why we can't get any."

Greene said Clark Brothers, located in Warrenton, Virginia, still rations .22 rimfire ammo because demand is still as strong as it was a year or even two years ago. Customers are limited to 100 rounds or one box of bulk ammo.

"When we have it," added Greene.

Retail websites also continue to experience shortages. MidwayUSA.com, for example, has about 24 Long Rifle options available, but nearly four times as many .22 rimfire options are marked as "unavailable." Those in stock are typically high-end ammo, priced at as much as three or four times that of standard bulk .22 ammo. Sportsmans-Guide.com has similar availability.

So who or what is to blame for the continued shortage? Greene and Denton agree: Hoarders.

"I think everyone has a basement full of .22 rimfire," said Denton. "I can't think of any other explanation, although with the increase in gun sales, there has been an increase in the total number or rimfire guns out there."

Bazinet says consumer demand created "self-perpetuating shortages," but he points out that .22 rimfire is the most popular type of firearm. People tend to buy in bulk, he adds, because it's relatively inexpensive and it's a popular caliber for all ages. What's more, gun manufacturers have introduced an endless variety of new rimfire platforms, including conversion kits for existing centerfire firearms. Instead of shooting more expensive, larger-caliber ammo, firearms enthusiasts are practicing with rimfire, when they can get it.

Greene isn't sure if that's a valid explanation, though. Clark Brothers has an outdoor range connected to their store, and while plenty of people shoot .22 rimfire guns, there does not seem to be a spike in rimfire activity, says Greene. In other words, instead of taking their newly purchased ammo out back, they are taking it home.

Bazinet can't say if the long-running rimfire shortage will end anytime soon. However, industry insiders feel confident only one thing will slow it: A shift in the gun debate. There's no question the current political climate has led to uncertainty among gun owners. Fears of restrictions on guns and even talk of exorbitant taxes on ammo have led many gun owners to prepare for potential ammo shortages, even if the talk of restrictions is still only talk. GDTM

103-R Remington 12 Gauge Model 870 Express Pump Shotgun 28" vent rib barrel with excellent bright bore, 3" chamber and screw in "full" Rem choke tube, all metal was covered in "camo" tape but has been removed on receiver and a little on barrel, plain hardwood pistol grip stock with impress checkering and solid rubber logo butt pad, excellent function$195

104-R Sauer & Son 12 Gauge Boxlock Side By Side "Prussia" Made Shotgun 26" barrels with raised concave rib, minty bright bores, 2 3/4" chambers and fixed full and improved cylinder chokes, 98% original blue with a little fading towards muzzles, 90%+ original case color on lightly engraved receiver, case color on engraved triggerguard is well faded, greener cross bolt boxlock action is tight as new, double triggers, extractors, beautiful tiger stripe dark Walnut pistol grip stock with fine line cut checkering, serrated hard rubber buttplate, silver "initial oval" and matching lever release splinter style forend, super looking with old world quality but nice modern dimensions and weighs only 6 pounds (C&R)$1525

105-R Traditions / Fausti 20 Gauge "Sporting Clays III" Italian Made Over/Under Shotgun 28" vent rib barrels with 3" chambers, mint bores, ported sides and screw in full and improved cylinder choke tubes, 99% original blue with a stainless steel receiver, receiver has clay birds in gold along with a Fausti gold shield and gold single selective trigger, auto ejectors, excellent European Walnut pistol grip stock with cut checkering, lever release forend and black rubber 3/4" vent recoil pad giving an L.O.P. of 14 1/4", excellent function and very nice looking from a quality maker$985

106-R Winchester 12 Gauge Model 50 Autoloader Shotgun 28" plain barrel with mint bore, 2 3/4" chamber and fixed modified choke, 99 1/2% original bright blue, mint lightly figured Walnut pistol stock with cut checkering and checkered logo plastic buttplate, as new overall, made in 1960 (C&R)$435

107-R Winchester 12 Gauge Model 59 Autoloader Shotgun 26" "Win-Lite" barrel with mint bore, 2 3/4" chamber and factory "Versalite" choke tube marked modified, 97% original black finish on fiberglass wound barrel and anodized aluminum receiver, receiver has roll engraved game scene and a gold toned triggerguard and bolt release button, very good+ figured American black Walnut pistol grip stock with cut checkering, logo plastic buttplate and matching forend, made in 1963, excellent function and a nice light (7 pounds) fast handling 12 gauge that shows light field use (C&R)$395

108-R Winchester 12 Gauge Model 59 Autoloader Shotgun 26" "Win-Lite" barrel with mint bore, 2 3/4" chamber and "Versalite" improved cylinder screw in choke tube, 98% original blue/black finish with some scratches in outer fiberglass shell on barrel, roll engraved alloy receiver with no signs of cracking, excellent Walnut pistol grip stock with cut checkering, logo plastic buttplate and matching forend, excellent function showing little or no actual use, made in 1965 (last year of production and probably one of the last made) (C&R)$465

109-R Winchester 12 Gauge Model 101 Over/Under Shotgun 28" vent rib barrels with mint bores, 2 3/4" chambers and fixed full and modified chokes, 99% original bright blue with a nicely engraved receiver, gold single selective trigger, auto ejector, excellent dark American black Walnut stock with grip cap and logo plastic buttplate, matching lever release forend with an un-repaired cracks on left and right sides forward of receiver, excellent function and a very sharp looker showing only a few dings and scratches from closet storage$815

ANTIQUE AND BLACKPOWDER FIREARMS (NO FFL REQUIRED):

110-R Bacon .31 Caliber Cap & Ball "Excelsior" 1st Model Pocket Revolver 4" octagon barrel with good strong but pitted bore, metal is a nice smooth light gray with original blue only under grips, traces of case color on rammer body, lightly engraved frame, very good (5) oval panel sporting scenes on round cylinder, matching numbers, complete and functioning but cylinder stop bolt does not allow proper tight lockup, very good smooth 2 piece Walnut grips$385

111-R Bacon .31 Caliber Cap & Ball "Excelsior" 1st Model Pocket Revolver 5" octagon barrel with very good bright bore, good strong traces of original blue and case color, all matching numbers, engraved frame and (5) oval panel sporting scene cylinder, very good Walnut smooth 2 piece grips, excellent function with tight lockup, very nice looking$495

112-R Bacon / B.J. Hart & Bro. .31 Caliber Cap & Ball 2nd Model Pocket Revolver 6" round barrel with good strong but well pitted bore, metal is mostly smooth gray with just a hint of blue and case color, engraved frame, fluted un-engraved 5 shot cylinder, all matching numbers, complete and functioning but lockup is a little shaky, repaired crack on left grips panel of smooth Rosewood grips$475

113-R Colt .22 Rimfire "Open Top" Pocket Revolver 2 3/16" barrel with good strong but pitted bore, 80% original nickel with some added "cross hatch" engraving, excellent walnut birdshead grips, made in 1875, good function but hand spring is a bit weak$315

114-R Colt .22 R.F. "Open Top" Pocket Revolver 2 3/8" round barrel with fair pitted bore, 60% original nickel on metal, with most loss on cylinder, there is a "Line" engraving pattern cut into nickel revealing the brass frame all matching numbers including very good smooth walnut birdshead grips, excellent function, made in 1875$295

115-R Colt .31 Cal. Cap and Ball Model 1849 Pocket Revolver 4" octagon barrel with good strong but pitted bore, no original finish on smooth gray metal with light peppery pitting and some scattered impact marks mostly around wedge and cylinder, top of barrel is marked "address Col. Sam'l Colt New-York U.S. America" cylinder scene is only partially visible, brass backstrap, triggerguard, very good original one piece smooth Walnut grips, all matching numbers with un-numbered wedge, safety pins on cylinder are mostly flattened, safety notch on hammer is not functioning, loading and full cock notch are fine, excellent shootable condition and all original, made in 1861$595

116-R Colt .36 Caliber Cap & Ball Model 1851 London Navy 1st Generation Black Powder Revolver 7 1/2" octagon barrel with very good, bright but lightly pitted bore, marked "address Col. Colt London" on top barrel flat, no original blue or case color but metal is a smooth silvery gray with little or no pitting and crisp clear markings, 98% cylinder scene, all matching numbers including the wedge, excellent one piece smooth Walnut grips, excellent function, missing only cylinder safety pins, made in 1855, comes in reproduction wood case with accessories$1275

117-R Colt .38 Centerfire 3 1/2" Round Barrel Cartridge Revolver 3 1/2" barrel with very good bright but lightly pitted bore, 40% original silver plate on frame and barrel, no original finish on cylinder but almost full "stage coach holdup" scene, matching cylinder, barrel and frame, backstrap/triggerguard are mismatched and from an 1849 pocket model which is uncommon but correct for this model, very good one piece smooth Walnut grips, excellent function$565

118-R Colt .38 Rimfire "3 1/2" Round Barrel without Ejector" Cartridge Conversion Revolver 3 1/2" barrel with fairly good well pitted bore, 60% original nickel plate on barrel, cylinder and frames with just a trace of nickel on brass backstrap / triggerguard, very good smooth walnut one piece grips which are very slightly undersize, all visible serial numbers are matching, arbor is not matching, 80% good clean "holdup" scene on cylinder, excellent function, made in its own serial range$425

119-R Colt .41 Colt Centerfire "New Line" Spur Trigger Revolver 2 1/4" barrel with good strong but well pitted bore, no original finish remains, metal is a light gray with scattered light pitting on frame and barrel with pitting a bit heavier on cylinder, frame was originally case colored but is now only evident under grips, all matching numbers, etched panel on left side of barrel shows a just barely visible "Colt New .41", marked "41 Cal. C" on left side of frame, very good Rosewood "birdshead" grips, excellent function and a nice example of a 1st model .41 New Line revolver, cylinder pin is a well made replacement and the gun shows numerous British proofs and was made in 1875$365

120-R Iver Johnson .32 Rimfire "American Eagle" Double Action Solid Frame Revolver 2 1/2" round barrel with fair pitted bore, fixed sights with blade front and notch in tip of hammer for rear sight, 95%+ original bright nickel finish, top-strap marked "American eagle/ patented June 4, '78 and Feb. 25, '79", metal shows some peppery pitting but nothing serious, near excellent American eagle motif hard rubber "saw handle" grips, excellent function both single and double action, a very early 1880's Iver Johnson$115

121-R Iver Johnson /Johnson & Bye .38 S&W "Lightning Express" Double Action Only Revolver 4 1/2" octagon barrel with very good bright bore, 85% original bright nickel finish, front sight is missing, grooved top strap for rear sight, bulldog head motif on excellent checkered hard rubber grips, hammer is cracked at gunsmith replaced firing pin and double action needs a slight cocking on hammer to operate, probably a Worcester, MA. made Iver Johnson from his early association with "Bye", just has historical value from the late 1880's$115

122-R Remington - Smoot .32 Rimfire "New Model No. 2" Spur Trigger Revolver 2 3/4" ribbed octagon barrel with very good bright but pitted bore, 80% original nickel dulled from dried grease, very good birdshead checkered hard rubber grips faded to brown, excellent function$395

123-R Remington - Smoot .32 Rimfire "New Model No 2" Spur Trigger Revolver 2 3/4" ribbed octagon barrel with good strong bright but pitted bore, 60% original nickel with right side having a speckled gray pitting, left birdshead grip is missing about 2/3 of its size, right grip is good, very good function$195

124-R Remington - Smoot .38 Centerfire "Saw Handle New Model No. 3" Spur Trigger Revolver 3 3/4" ribbed barrel with very good strong but well pitted bore, 85% original nickel with flaked off patches on cylinder and a fine peppering of other surfaces, excellent "R" logo checkered hard rubber grips perfect function$395

125-R Remington .41 Rimfire "Elliott's Patent" Single Shot "Mississippi" Derringer 2 1/2" round barrel with good strong but pitted bore, 30% original nickel plate with the remainder a medium gray with light pitting, very good original smooth walnut birdshead style grips, matching numbers on barrel and frame, excellent function, action looks like a miniature rolling block with hammer doing dual duty$875

126-R Smith and Wesson .32 Rimfire No. 1 1/2 First Issue Spur Trigger Revolver 3 1/2" octagon barrel with good strong but well pitted bore, 20% original blue with little or no pitting, excellent clear markings, matching numbers including square butt Rosewood grips (right panel has a silver of wood missing at backstrap), missing its fixed ejector pin under barrel and cylinder stop bolt spring is missing or broken so must be manually released for operation, still a nice looking 1 1/2 1st issue that should repair easily$235

127-R Springfield Arms Co. .30 Caliber Rimfire Spur Trigger Pocket Revolver 3 1/8" octagon barrel with fair lightly pitted dark bore, little to no original finish on barrel or cylinder with some light pinprick pitting, brass frame shows a little original silver plate under grips, gunsmith made cylinder axle pin, very good Rosewood square butt grips, cylinder stop and hand are badly worn so operation is sporadic, interesting lading gate with latching arm$185

128-R Springfield 30/40 Krag Model 1898 Bolt Barreled Action Carbine 22" barrel with very good bright bore with frosting in grooved, 90% thinning original blue on barrel, mottled silvery receiver with traces of blue, loading gate is mostly gray with some light pitting, original carbine blade front sight, missing its open rear sight, missing its complete bolt, cutoff lever and all wood, magazine with all associated parts is present along with trigger, sear and stock mounting screws, well worth returning to original carbine$395

129-R Springfield 30/40 Krag Model 1898 Barreled Action Bolt Rifle 24" cut barrel with excellent bright bore, 90% original thinning blue on barrel and receiver, no front sight due to cut barrel, rear sight screw holes but no rear sight, receiver has a complete functioning magazine and gate, no bolt or other small frame parts, parts or rebuild$125

130-R Springfield 45/70 Model 1884 "Trapdoor" Single Shot Complete Barreled Action Rifle 32 5/8" with excellent bright bore, 95% blue on barrel and breech block, receiver is a mottled gray with a little pinprick pitting and is numbered in the 406.xxx range, correct blade type front sight and "Buffington" style "ladder" rear sight graduated to 2000 yards and marked "R", breech block is blue and marked "U.S. Model 1873", complete with firing pin, extractor/ejector and opening/closing lever, no wood or lockplate$215

131-R Springfield 45/70 Model 1884 Barreled Action Single Shot Trapdoor Carbine 22" barrel with fair, well pitted bore, metal shows fine pitting overall with no original blue, original front sight, missing its rear sight, no breech block or other receiver mounted parts, not a whole lot to work with but could be turned back into an original carbine$75

132-R Smith & Wesson .32 Rimfire No. 1 1/2" Top-Break Spur Trigger Revolver 3 1/2" ribbed barrel with fair pitted bore, all metal is a smooth dark brown with some scattered light pitting and traces of original blue, all matching numbers including excellent smooth Rosewood birds head grips, inside of left grip is scratch marked "J.W.W. 1897" works fine but barrel hinge is loose$185

133-R Winchester-Lee Straight Pull .236 Caliber Musket Barreled Action Bolt Rifle 28" barrel with good strong bore showing frosting in grooves, barrel is mostly gray with original blue mixed in and showing light peppery pitting, receiver is mostly smooth gray, pedestal mounted blade front sight, rear sight is a military style "ladder" sight graduated to 2000 yards, barrel shows some light vise marks at breech end, receiver is marked "manufactured by the Winchester Repeating Arms Co.-" with 1893, 1894 and 1895 patent dates and with serial number on top of receiver that is under 13,000, complete bolt with firing pin, extractor/ejector is present along with small frame mounted parts, no wood, magazine or other parts$285

M21-20ga. & 28ga. Standard Grade-Two Barrel Set. Bbl. #1-20ga.-28" bored Full & Mod. Bbl. #2-28ga.-28" bored I.C. & Mod. The 28ga. barrels are the original, early style-"Mid 1930s". "They had no peer for strength and dependability. Carefully fashioned by hand, these barrels today are still the hallmark of excellence and are very scarce. The barrels are raised matted rib with metal bead sights. "DOUBLE TRIGGERS WITH EJECTORS". The stock is the first early style with long slender pistol grip made only the first few years of production and both barrels have the early style Splinter Forends. L.O.P. 14", Comb
1-9/16", Heel 2-3/8". Being a Standard Grade the checkering pattern is 20 lines per inch Diamond Pattern. It has been completely factory refurbished. This M21 has the classic look which serves as the standard for the Model 21! $18,500.

M21-20ga. Two Barrel Set - S.N. 5296.
Barrel #1-28" Full & Mod. Barrel #2-26" W.S.
1 & W.S. 2. Raised matted ribs. Returned to Factory under Repair Order-37890 August 3, 1978. It was completely refurbished and embellished with the second barrel, 21-3 engraving, streamlined the receiver to a "Flatside" also called Full Rounded. The stock has been replaced with the straight style configuration and a Checkered Butt.

L.O.P. 14-1/4" Comb 1-1/2" Heel 2-1/2".
All proof marks and builder's stamps are correct. A very nice older "1935" Factory
M21 in 98% condition, Cased, EXCELLENT VALUE! $12,500.

M21-20ga. Skeet Grade, bbl. #1-28" raised matted rib, bored W.S.-I & W.S.-2. Non-Automatic Safety, single trigger, select ejectors, pistol grip stock, checkered butt, L.O.P. 14-5/16" -drop at heel 2-12"
-comb 1-1/2" -pitch 1-5/8". Skeet finish, inspection finish date Oct. 29, 1948. "A SECOND 410ga. BARREL WAS ADDED, 28"
-3" CHAMBERS BORED W.S.-I & W.S.-2."
All proof & builder's mark are correct and indicates barrel was done at the factory.
Condition 99%, and has the old style leather case with all accessories. A remarkable M21 to say the least from my personal collection. $19,900

M100-308 Cal. Wood has very nice Marble & Tiger Tail figure with basket weave checkering. Mfg. 1965, over all condition 99%, S.N.117560. $695.

MULTI CALIBER ADAPTERS

ADAPTER & CONVERSION UNITS OF ALL TYPES:

- INSERTS FOR BREAK-OPEN SHOTGUNS
- CHAMBER ADAPTER FOR RIFLES
- CHAMBER ADAPTER FOR SPECIALTY PISTOLS
- ANTIQUES & WILDCATS CUSTOM MADE!

These inserts/adapters allow rifle owners to target practice at local indoor ranges where full power loads are prohibited, or take small game without the noise, meat destruction or the expense of full loads. As a survival device, my adapters are unequalled, allowing a single rifle or pistol to fire a variety of ammunition. New shooters will learn marksmanship without fighting recoil and loud muzzle blast.

LETHAL FORCE LAW: Get the Facts

Massad Ayoob's first book on the use of deadly force by the private citizen in defense of self and others, In the Gravest Extreme, is considered the authoritative text in its field. Deadly Force is the follow-up to this groundbreaking guide, incorporating Ayoob's thirty extra years of experience, during which he's been an expert witness in weapons cases, chair of the Firearms Committee of the American Society of Law Enforcement Trainers, and much more.

This guide will help you understand any legal and ethical issues concerning the use of lethal force by private citizens. You'll also learn about the social and psychological issues surrounding the use of lethal force for self-defense or in defense of others. In addition to exploring these issues, Ayoob also discusses the steps a responsible armed citizen can and should take in order to properly prepare for or help mitigate a lethal force situation.

AR-15/M-16 DROP-IN PARTS

A AMBIDEXTROUS/OVERSIZE MAG. RELEASE. This is the practical way to release your magazine from either your left or right hand. Ideal for quick reloads while keeping your rifle on target.

B OVERSIZE CHECKERED MAG. RELEASE BUTTON. Easier to operate with your trigger finger. Replaces the standard mag. catch, spring and button.

SPECS: Steel, Blue, Matte Finish. Button .625" Diameter$16.99

C EXTENDED CHARGING HANDLE LATCH. Extra wide and long for easier operating of your charging handle with low mounted scopes.

SPECS: Steel, Matte Black Finish. 1.195" long, .575" wide$9.99

AR-15 EXT. CHARGING HANDLE

AR-10 .308 Extended Steel Charging Handle Fully CNC'd in the USA with O/S Paddle Latch$99.99

AR-15 Extended Steel Charging Handle Fully CNC'd in the USA with O/S Paddle Latch$79.99

Fully CNC'd from billet steel. Power Custom charging handles are a tactical upgrade to the AR-10 (.308 rifles) platform and the AR-15/M-16's. The all steel body will not bend or break even under rigorous use. The extended charging handle latch makes it easy to operate the bolt when wearing gloves and the stippling on the face of the latch ensures solid grip when hands are sweaty and slippery. The AR-10 handle fits the .308 DPMS LR-308, Knight's Armament SR-25/MK11/M110, LaRue OSR, Noveske 308, and Patriot Ordnance Factory P-308; does NOT fit S&W MP10, ArmaLite® AR-10®, Rock River Arms, or SIG 716. Guaranteed to never break.
